49 entries from 16 high schools were included in this year's competition. The entries were judged by three award-winning Ohio artists: George Carey, Susan Kulstad, and Jim Watson.

Winning entries from each of the 435 Congressional districts will be displayed in the U.S. Capitol complex for a period of one year.

"I congratulate all of the students who entered this year's competition, and I look forward to seeing Nick's artwork on my walk to the House floor. It will be so nice to see a reminder of home when I'm working in Washington," said Congressman Charlie Wilson.

Nick's Grand Prize winning entry will hang in the Capitol Cannon Tunnel for one year along with winning pieces from all participating Congressional districts across the nation.

Nick will be invited to Washington, D.C. for The ribbon-cutting ceremony on June 28, 2007 to open the national showing of the Congressional Arts Competition.
